

Kevin Flynn

Conductor and Woodwind Tutor - Intermediate Concert Band

Kevin began his musical journey when he took up saxophone at the age of 14 as part of North Lanarkshire's Instrumental Music Service.

He soon gained a place at the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama Junior Conservatoire and later completed his Bachelor of Music at the same institution in saxophone with subsidiary studies in flute and clarinet.

After taking a brief break from music, he completed his PGDE in Secondary Music and taught in many South Lanarkshire schools, in addition to a period of work as a woodwind teacher at Sistema Scotland's Big Noise project in Raploch, Stirling.

Kevin has now taken up a new post with West Lothian Council at the James Young High School along with work for the Scottish Qualifications Authority and the Scottish Association of Music Education.

Throughout his career, Kevin has continued to perform in a wide variety of contexts, ranging from recitals and concerts orchestras, to funk bands, jazz combos and extensive musical theatre work as a woodwind doubler.

Kevin's very first teaching post was as woodwind tutor for South Lanarkshire Orchestral Society's Senior Concert Band in 2013, and he was delighted to be invited in 2017 to conduct the Intermediate Concert Band.
